The total number of farms is 1,925,276, and 96 percent of them are owned by the Fihpinos. Ninety-one percent of the mban property (consisting of houses and lands) is owned by Filipinos. The cultivated area in 1920 was 3,276,942 hectares, as compared with 2,361,483 in 1913, or 38.7 percent increase. COMMERCE. In 1913 the total foreign commerce was only 202,171,484; in 1920 the sum was 601,124,278. In 1913 the imports from the United States were about 50 percent of the total imports of the Philippine I slands. Since that time gradual increase was recorded to the extent that in 1920 our imports from the United States represent 70 percent of the total imports. REAL PROPERTY. Since 1913 the number of parcels of taxable property in the regular provinces has an increase of 1,700,000, or more than 100 percent mcrease. The volume of real properties subject to taxation has also an increase of over 800,000,000, or about 280 percent increase. II. Brief Historical I ntroduction. PRE-SPANISH PHILIPPINES. It is difficult to know the actual conditions of the Philippines without some reference to her past. The pre-S panish history of the Philippines is still shrouded in mystery. However, there are several outstanding facts which prove that while the islands might have been a part at some time or other of some Indian or Malayan empires, their connections were slight. They retained a great deal of the qualities of independent communities. One American investigator. Prof. Austin Craig, of the University of the Philippines, claims that a veritable native imperial family reigned in the islands before their discovery by Magellan in 1521, and that the first Spanish colonizers simply destroyed all records of such Philippine dynasty so as to facilitate the conquest of the archipelago.
