Reviews. Jan., 11. Ueber das Epithel der Macula acustica beim Menschen. Von Dr. M. V. Odenius, Prosector in Lund. (Separatabdruck aus M. Schultzes Archiv f. mikr. Anatomie Bd. III. 1867.) On the Epithelium of the Macula acustica in Man. By Dr. M. Y. Odenius, Prosector in Lund. (Reprint from M. Schultzes Archives of Microscopical Anatomy Vol. II, 1867.) With a plate. 12. Om Vestibular-säckarnes form och luge i människans öra. Af M. V. Odenius. (Foredraget i Physiographiska Sällskapet i Lund den 13 Mars, 1867.) On the form and position of the sacs of the Vestibule in the Human Ear. By M. V. Odenius. (Read before the Physiographical Society of Lund, March 13, 1867.) 1. The Swedish Archives of Medicine which we have placed at the head of the foregoing list, improves with every number, and may now challenge comparison with any journal, whether as regards the extent and importance of its articles, or the beauty of its typography and illustrations. From the notices which we have given of previous issues, our readers are aware that this publication differs from periodicals properly so called, in not appearing at stated intervals, although two or three numbers are usually given yearly, and in the greater length and more elaborate nature of some of the essays it contains. Each essay is separately paged, and when illustrated, is immediately followed by its plates, so as with ease to form, if desired, a separate work. A. The subject of the first essay in the number before us, the gustatory papillae of the tongue, is one which has already at some length engaged our attention, in considering the work of Axel Key in our twenty-ninth volume, page 422, and of Dr. Engelmann, of Utrecht, in the number of this Review for July, 1868. Their researches related, however, to the tongue of the frog, while Hr. Lovén has investigated the organ in the mammalia. The author (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and dont occur in the book.)
