Parliamentary Electorate, Municipal Electorate; first Reading of the Bill Universal Suffrage. Union of the Centres. II. The Bonapartist danger. The Lefts accept the Constituent Power. Second Reading of the Municipal Electorate Bill. Constitutional proposals. First Republican Victory; urgency voted on the Casimir Prier proposal. First Reading of the Municipal Organisation Bill. III. The Comte de Chambord's Manifesto, 2nd July, 1874. The Lucien Bnin Interpellation. The Cissey Cabinet beaten. Message from the Marshal, 9th July, 1874. IV. Ministerial Constitutional Programme. Bill of the Committee of Thirty. The Casimir-Prier motion discussed and rejected. Adjournment of the Constitutional Debate. The state of siege maintained. The Assembly adjourns from the 5th August to the 30th November, 1874. I THREE years had passed since the National Assembly first met at Bordeaux. It had concluded peace with Germany; it had repressed a formidable insurrection. It had then assumed the constituent power; but it had failed to give a Constitution to the country. The Right Majority was rent between three monarchical parties. These divisions favoured the Republic, which existed in fact.
