Excerpt from History of the Town of Hampton Falls, New Hampshire: From the Time of the First Settlement Within Its Borders, 1640 Until 1900

In my boyhood I listened with interest and pleasure to hear my grandfather, Jacob Brown, Messrs. Benjamin Sanborn, Moses and Reuben Batchelder, Dea. Jeremiah Hobbs of Hampton, and other old men talk about the happenings, manners, and customs of their youthful days, and hear them relate the tales which had been told them by their parents of men and things in the earlier settlement of the country. During the past half century great changes have come about, which have drawn attention away from matters of this kind. The daily newspapers, magazines, and periodicals, with other things of interest rendered available by easy and rapid communication, have tended to draw attention away from these things until the traditional history of the past was in danger of being lost. unless it could be collected, written up, and published in a form where it could be preserved. With this purpose in view the writer has collected the material which appears in this work. In the winter of 1896-97, I visited Dea. Emery Batchelder many times. He was the only person living at that time who was acquainted, to any great extent, with the traditional history of the town; he had it as it had come down in his family from father to son for live generations; he took great interest in such things and his knowledge was very full and complete. By comparing the notes obtained from him with the record books, I am able to locate nearly all the families whose names appear upon the record. The information thus obtained enabled me to get at other things much easier, and opened a way to much valuable matter. Had this work been delayed for six months much of our history would have been forever lost, as Mr. Batchelder died soon after. To him this town wilt always he indebted for the preservation of much useful and valuable information which could at that time have been had from no other source.
