The Eastern Association. 1643.--Whilst in the south the resistance of Gloucester had weakened the kings power of attack, a formidable barrier was being raised against Newcastle's advance in the east. Early in the war, certain counties in different parts of the country had associated themselves together for mutual defence, and of these combinations the strongest was the Eastern Association, comprising the counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Cambridge and Hertford. These five counties raised forces in common and paid them out of a common purse. 18. Oliver Cromwell. 1642--1643.--The strength which the Eastern Association soon developed was owing to its placing itself under the leadership of Oliver Cromwell, a member of Parliament, who had taken arms when the civil war began, and who soon distinguished himself by his practical sagacity. Your troops, he said to Hampden after the flight of the Parliamentary cavalry at Edgehill, are, rriost of them, old decayed serving men and tapsters, and such kind of fellows, and their troops are gentlemens sons, younger sons, and persons of quality; do you think.that the spirits of such base and mean fellows will ever be able to encounter gentlemen that have honour and courage and resolution in them? You must get men of a spirit, and take it not ill what I ay--I know you will not--of a spirit that is likely to go on as far as gentlemen will go; or else you will be beaten still. It was this idea which Cromwell, having been appointed a colonel, put-in execution in the Eastern Association. He took for his soldiers sternly Puritan men, who had their hearts in the cause; but he was not content with religious zeal alone. Every one who se...
