No creemos, como Halleck, que esta observacion sea particularmente aplicable a las decisiones del almirantazgo britanico. En nuestro concepto, la observacion anterior es general, y aplicable a las decisiones de todos ellos. 37. Los tribunales de presas dependen generalmente, Tribunal en los Estados de Europa, del poder ejecutivo. Esto dismi-do, ngsudo nuye en mucho la fuerza que pueden tener sus decisiones unidos. como fuentes del derecho internacional. En los Estados-Unidos norteamericanos los tribunales de presas son regulares formados por jueces independientes y vitalicios, nombrados por el Presidente de la republica y confirmados por el Senado. Estos jueces solo pueden ser separados del ejercicio de sus funciones en caso de prevaricacion. Las leyes vigentes en los Estados-Unidos sobre presas maritimas son obligatorias para los tribunales que entienden en estos asuntos. Cuando no hay ley expresa, se supone que el Gobierno no se separa de los usos admitidos por las naciones, y se decide en consecuencia. Estos tribunales no dependen, pues, directamente del poder ejecutivo, y sus decisiones pueden ser consultadas con gran fruto. Ademas, la ultima guerra colosal entre federales y confederados, da a sus decisiones, por la variedad de casos y cuestiones que resuelven, una grande importancia, y un vitalisimo interes. 38. La misma importancia que como fuentes del derecho internacional tienen las decisiones de los tribunales de deiostribS presas maritimas, se puede conceder a las
