

Living Relationship: Finding Harmony With Others

In relationships, we tend to focus outward, seeking outside ourselves and often try to change and or control others. In this book, author/teacher Scott Kiloby uses innovative methods to penetrate such self-limiting beliefs as they show up in our relationships. How the inquiries work: Scott invites us to turn our attention to the deficient self that is running the show in those moments, and to see through that self by using one of three (simple) inquiries included in the book: 1. The Boomerang Inquiry 2. The Unfindable Inquiry 3. The Panorama Inquiry. As we begin using the Living Inquiries, a deep and profound clarity and peace arise. We naturally shed the core pain that comes with these stories. Our relationships begin to automatically harmonize themselves, without any outward pointing, blame, or self-protection. We see through our limiting beliefs. We find harmony with others!
