

Living Without the Veil: Knowing God Intimately, and Making Him Known

Psalm 45:1 My heart is overflowing with a good theme. I recite my composition concerning the King. My tongue is the pen of a ready writer. God put it on my heart to write a book about Intimacy with Him. This came at a time when I was just diagnosed with terminal brain cancer. I recently was told that I have less than a year to live. It has been a very daunting task to see this book to completion in midst of the sickness. However, I have pressed on because I believe that the mission of this book is important. Famous mathematician Pascal claimed that every person is born with a God shaped hole. In a sense of emptiness and even desperation people will clench on to anything from food to bad relationships-but only when they respond to the beckoning call of God, are they able to quench the desire to fill complete. When Jesus died on the cross and rose again, the veil separating man from God was torn, opening up the path to an intimate relationship with Christ. Living Without the Veil is a book for every person who recognizes that they have a void that can only be filled by Christ and for every person who is ready to build their own intimate relationship with the Creator. It is also about living an unveiled life of transparency and sincerity in order to make God known to those who are still need of having the void filled.
