

Mating for Life (Harlequin Superromance No. 639)

Sometimes you can go home again. And sometimes that's where you find your life, your love, your destiny. It's what happens when Josie Calhoun returns home to Maizeville, Kansas. She's got some work to finish up, she's tired of city life and she wants to spend a few months with her grandfather. But those calm, well-ordered plans fly off in all directions when she meets sheriff's deputy Mackenzie Scott. Mack is still getting over the loss of his fiancée, so he's not really interested in a romance with anyone else. Especially not an impetuous, opinionated, beautiful redhead. Or so he tells himself. Despite all the differences between them, despite all the arguments, Mack and Josie both want the same thing from life— a forever after love, a forever after marriage. And they discover that they want it with each other. This is taken from the back cover of this book.
