Not illustrated. 1873 Excerpt: ...guilty and sentenced to imprisonment for the long period of eighteen months. Some of my ardent political friends murmured, but I have never repented of what I then did. On the contrary, I acted on my own principles, and took the line by which I have ever since abided in cases of libel. The defendant was one of Carliles shopmen.⁵ He refused to tell his name, which I believe was Humphrey Boyle. He was, therefore, indicted by some clumsy circumlocution, and ⁴ In the session of 1821. See next chapter. ⁵ Richard Carlile, notorious in those days as a publisher of revolutionary and atheistic tracts. to prevent any inconvenient doubt of his identity, I kept him in Court the whole time, and contrary to the then usual practice at the Old Bailey, passed sentence upon him at once, instead of leaving him to the Eecorder at the close. His libel was of the very worst description, a resume of every offensive passage, both on religion and politics, that had appeared in the periodical work styled The Eepublican. The fact of selling was clearly proved. The defence was written, very long, full of attacks on the Bible, as justifications of the argument in that part of the libel. Mr. Adolphus,⁶ who prosecuted for the Association, requested me to prevent his going on; but I declined to interfere. I did, indeed, remonstrate with the defendant, but I left him to his own discretion in taking care of his own interest. Mr. Justice Best (Lord Wynford) had so interfered, but I had presented the petition to Parliament which complained of him for so doing.⁷ His interruption was by imposing a fine for what the defendant had said. Lord Chief Justice Abbott (Lord Tenterden) had also stopped some one in his defence. I peremptorily refused. In summing up the case to the jury, I left it whol...
