

Breaking Into and Succeeding in Mineral Cosmetics Business

Starting a cosmetics line may sound like a huge thing. With celebrities like Cindy Crawford, Christie Brinkley, Jessica Alba, and Kylie Jenner pouring their products in the market, the cosmetics industry sounds even more glamorous. Good thing is, glam is in the eyes of the beholder. You can actually start a cosmetics line with little capital. In this book, we'll show you how you can start the much-hyped mineral cosmetics line despite limited startup capital and not owning any formula. You'll learn the shortcuts to starting a cosmetics line like Michelle Phan the YouTube makeup guru and other celebrities and social media stars. You will also learn about earning potentials, like how much it actually costs you to produce one unit of cosmetics and how much you can earn annually. The profit margin can actually be quite substantial. According to some rough calculations involving a particular online wholesaler and a recipe, an outlay of about $100 can be enough to produce about 30 jars of foundation. One jar can sell for anywhere between $15 and $55, depending on the market and the brand. So at the low end of that price range, we're looking at a profit of about $350. We're talking about more than 200 percent of profit margin. The more you make, the higher your profit margin will be. Good thing is, starting a cosmetics line doesn't need to involve a lot of startup capital. Many wholesalers of raw ingredients and ready-to-use make-up bases have set low purchase minimums specifically to help people like you get a start in the industry. A couple hundred dollars will buy you enough filler and pigment to get you started. And you can open an online store for very little up-front expense and sell your cosmetics without invoking any of the overhead of a physical outlet. Mineral cosmetics do not react to skin, they're less likely to cause irritation. They are less likely to clog pores. They aren't toxic to our skin and the environment.

And because they are inorganic, they won't go rancid in a few months, so they don't need preservatives to boost their shelf life. The filler ingredients mentioned above are known to soothe skin and provide UVB protection. You don't have to be a chemist to get into this field. Mineral cosmetics are made from inert inorganic ingredients ground up and mixed together. While many mineral makeup business owners do create their own lines entirely from scratch, it's certainly not a requirement. In addition to all the sources, we'll show you how and where you can learn to develop your own formula. Choose from their list of ready-to-go items, request some custom tweaks to the active ingredients or the pigment blending, and end up with a catalog of beautiful cosmetics items unique to your company. We'll get you started with a list of private labelers and contract manufacturers who'll put their laboratories to work for you. This information alone would cost you hundreds or even thousands of dollars elsewhere. Internet-based business can sell to any consumer anywhere in the world. You can work from home from anywhere in the world and be successful in this business. In this book, you will learn about: - Myths, Realities, and Basics - Mineral Cosmetics in A Nutshell - Ten Popular Niches - Earning Potentials - Labeling Requirements - Licensing, Registration, and Certification - Starting Your Own Line - Finding Formula and Developing Brand - Manufacturing Your Products (Private Label and Contract Manufacturing) - Legalities - Being Successful - Professional and Trade Association - Trade Shows - Success Profiles - List of Fragrance and Flavor Laboratories - List of Private Label and Contract Manufacturing Companies
