

A Narrative Of The Great Revival Which Prevailed In The Southern Armies (Evangelical Revivals Book 90)

This book, written by an army Chaplain in the American Confederate Army during the Civil War, outlines the revival amongst the Confederate troops in the early to mid-1860s. It explains the hindrances as well as the helps to the revival and then continues to give more precise details, season by season, of the revival, providing examples of Gods work amongst the men living, and dying, in extremely harsh conditions. It gives evidence that God still works, despite the dreadful situations in which men find themselves. To those who may struggle with the record of how God blessed those who rushed to arms without just cause the author says, read the narrative, weigh the facts and then make up your verdict. First published 1877. 427 pages.
