

War and Society in East Central Europe, Volume I

Originally published by Brooklyn College Press, this tenth volume in the Brooklyn College Studies in Society and Change series is the product of interdisciplinary research shared at scholarly conferences. The essays study the intriguing variations in language, religion and government in this area of Europe, as well as differences in concepts of national defense, of the characters of the armed forces and of the ways of waging war. Co-published with Atlantic Research Publications, Inc.
