Not illustrated. 1789 Excerpt: ... course of some time, captain Palliser received a letter from Mr. Osbaldeston, then member of parliament for Scarborough, acquainting him that several neighbours of his had solicited, him to write in favour of one Cook, on board the captains ship. They had heard that captain Palliser had taken notice of him, and they requested if he thought Cook deserving of it, that he would point out in what manner Mr. Olbildeston might best contribute his assistance towards foiewarding the young mans promotion. The captain, in his reply, did justice to Mr. Cooks merit; but, as he had been only a sliort time in the navy, informed Mr. Osbaldeston that he could not be promoted as a commission officer. A masters warrant, captain Palliser added, might perhaps be procured for Mr. Cook, by which he would be raised to a station that he was well qualified to discharge with ability and credit. H Such a warrant he obtained on the icht of May, 1759, for the Grampus floop; but the proper master having unexpectedly returned to her, the appointment did not take place. Four days after he was made master of the Garland; when, upon enquiry, it was found that he could not join her, as the ship had already failed. On the next day, the 15th of May, he was appointed to the Mercury. These quick and successive appointments shew that his interest was strong, and that the intention to serve him was real and effectual. The destination of the Mercury was to North America, whenshe joined the fleet under the command of sir Charles Saunders, which, in conjunction with the land-forces under General Wolfe, was engaged in the famous siege of Quebec. During that siege, a difficult and dangerous service was
