

As You May Never See Us Again: The Civil War letters of George and Walter Battle, 4th North Carolina Infantry, Coming of Age on the Front Lines of the War Between the States

This is a collection of war letters written by teenagers George and Walter Battle during their service in Company F, 4th North Carolina Regiment, CSA. Underage, yet full of vitality and idealism, these boys were not just fighting for their country; they were fighting to protect their families name. Two young brothers had gone off to war as mere boys. Their experiences quickly hardened and molded them into veterans of the greatest army ever to march on American soil.
